

Developing markets today lead the world in economic growth. In turn, this growth is driving demand for natural resources worldwide. Our Global Growth and Resources strategy seeks to benefit from both trends by focusing on stocks of high-growth economies and resources-based companies. We believe that the rapid economic growth and urbanization of China, India, Brazil and other developing countries, as well as the structural deficit between supply and demand for food, energy and other raw materials, creates a long-term growth opportunity that may be best realized through this hybrid strategy.

Growing markets abroad – both for securities and for real goods and services – are rendering the US a shrinking share in world production and consumption. Developing economies can offer higher growth rates than more mature markets, and may offer “low correlation” returns – meaning their inclusion with other investments may smooth out overall portfolio performance. This strategy focuses on many of these fast-growing economies and the industrial sectors benefitting from this growth: energy, agriculture, and mining. It includes non-US companies, as well as US-based companies whose primary business activities are abroad. We use individual equities, closed-end funds, and exchange-traded funds (ETFs) to gain exposure to international equity and fixed-income holdings, particular countries or regions, and industrial sectors with high growth potential.

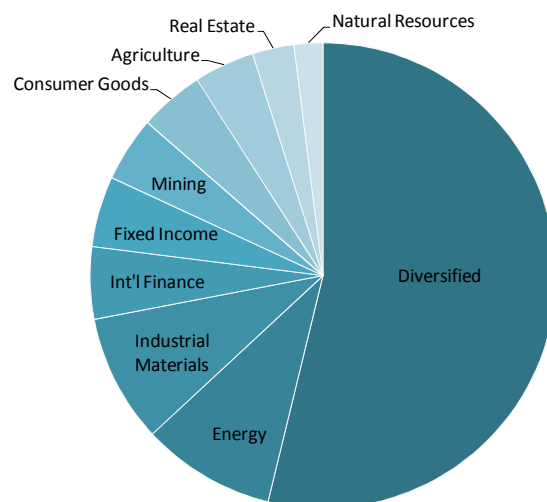

The strategy is advised by Gould consultant Stanley Haar. Mr. Haar has over 25 years of commodity and financial markets experience, in both domestic and international locales. He holds a JD degree from Stanford Law School, an MBA from the Stanford Graduate School of Management, and a masters degree from Stanford’s Food Research Institute, which includes a concentration in agricultural economics, trade policy, and futures markets.

This strategy should serve as a complement to a broadly diversified portfolio of more traditional investments, to provide exposure to geographical regions where the rate of economic growth is expected to exceed that of developed regions such as Europe and the United States.

SAMPLE COUNTRY BREAKDOWN

SAMPLE SECTOR BREAKDOWN

For more information on how Gould Asset Management can structure a Global Growth and Resources portfolio customized to your unique needs and objectives, please contact your investment representative, or one of our Portfolio Managers at 909-445-1291 or info@gouldasset.com.

Gould Asset Management LLC is a registered investment adviser. Note: registration does not imply a certain level of skill or training. A copy of Gould's current written disclosure statement discussing advisory services and fees is available for review upon request. Different types of investments involve varying degrees of risk, and there can be no assurance that any specific investment or investment strategy will be profitable in the future. Moreover, you should not assume that any discussion or information contained above serves as the receipt of, or as a substitute for, personalized investment advice from Gould Asset Management.